

1. Grab user inputs

2. Break down design process into individual functions

3. Test the individual functions for accuracy

4. Create table reader module to read values from tables automatically

5. Combine the different functions to carry out the design process

6. Design and implement the user interface

7. Test and debug the program for errors

8. Optimize and launch the program